Yes, and I cant answer that yet 😊 I can say that Scott and Dh'lah are the only set of twins, and that they do "not" have other siblings :)

In the halls, as fire flickered on the walls, Bevelles heart raced as she ran towards their next destination. The shards around her neck guided her, and she knew from the steam coming off in the water part of the temple that the fire part had to be around here somewhere. Past another corner and away from the center room, she followed the changing ruins until she came to a third stone door with the fire ruin on it. "This is it!" She cried, as she pressed her hand on the glowing embers of the ruin and waited for the door to open. The amber flames flanking the door flickered giving the entrance hall a warm glow.

Akihiko ran over. "Cool! I am so ready for this! And so glad it wasn't the air door. That would have been co-ol," he said, grinning. He poked the door and grinned. "It's warm," he said, not surprised at all. It was, after all, the fire door.

Cleo smiled, "I get the feeling that I will like this room very much." She took off the cloak that Saria had given her and the Saria stuffed it in her bag. Saria looked at the fire rune, wondering what wonders awaited them inside, traps, rivers of lava, firewalls, more phoenixes? Who knew? Cleo looked around as everyone caught up and then looked back at the door, her gold shimmering quietly in the torch light...

Glow followed the others, getting a little wet. She shook the water off before running one after Bevelle, nose twitching slightly. She was happy that they'd be going into the fire one next. At least it would be warm in this room. She hoped she wouldn't get burned. She wasn't worried about that though. They, hopefully, wouldn't have to get to close to any fire. Glow was looking forward to the warmth though.

((Lets see...Scott, Dh'lah and Kirah are all OCs that Ive developed over a VERY long time. Kirahs born with the ability to crate and control lighting, so she would naturally be the lighting elemental here. Scott the same but with Fire. Dh'lah is a bit trickier. He was born welding/creating/willing what would be the gas forms of poison, and as he grew, he eventually second a telechinesis type skill which covers just about everything under the kinesis umbrella. Hes also incredibly wise. They are all on the same cert because they are my OCS, but I can see why it might be confusing. All 3 are elementals.^.^ Hopefully that explains things clearer?))

As the door of stone creaked open, Bevelle was met with a blast of hot air. Amber embers and ash flew across and out of the door. What was in front of the group...was a big lava pit. The floor hung in place, like solid marble, only instead of a solid, it was viscous fire. Whatever the state, it wasn't going anywhere. Stalactites and mites, this time made of lava rock were clumped together in the room, sometimes joining in the middle to form a branch or window. Small islands rest in the water of lava, and a crevice adorned with fire torches could be seen on the other side. In the middle of the cavern on other side, a faint amber glow was seen. Bevelle was sure that this was the shard of fire.

Thalia, seeing fire, was finally excited to meet another elemental with a temper to match. She loved a good temper challenge. Especially when the fight was unfair. She started to walk faster, trying to reach the front of the group.

Ginger, Artemis, and Spirit ran closer, but stayed back, fearing a sudden burst of flames. They did NOT want to be burned.
((BTW, the RL Artemis is now sleeping on a box full of my passed Grandma's books ☺))

Saria coughed for a moment as the ash from the door hit her in the face, but she quickly recovered and walked over to stand by Bevelle. It would be really bad if the crystal started tugging her again in this room, instead incineration was not something Saria would enjoy...
Cleo sighed in comfort, yes it was hot, but it was sooo much warmer than any of the other rooms. She too looked at the islands of fire and up at the Stalactites and Stalagmites. "Careful if you fly Saria, with these sudden gusts of wind you could smash into one of those." She said pointing at one. Saria nodded in assent...

02-06 03:10 melody_s_ang 9221 - USR
Bevelle was glad the Cleo was beside her. She really didn't want to loose control and be tugged away in this room. Looking at Saria, she thought.
"We need a plan. There has to be something here that is meant to hurt intruders." She was almost positive that something was up with the lava. She would just feel it.

Akihiko sighed, picked up a rock, and threw it into the room. It hurtled towards the lave. "There. Now we just have to see what happens to the rock," he said, waiting and watching the rock. He didn't want to become a vampire shishkabob anytime soon.

Lapi and Luna had followed the group through both the ice and water areas. Lapi was amazed by the elementals. They were all so pretty. Luna thought so too, but not as much as Lapi - but still, she was pretty amazed by them. As they moved together with the group to the next area, the two wondered what kind of place they'd go to next. When the firey room opened, and the blast of very hot air hit them - Lapi's glasses fogged up. "Oh god!" She rubbed them, making the lenses clear again. She sighed in relief, then looked into the room. All of the lava and different fire type things were frightening to her. Luna smiled. "Don't worry. Lapi. We'll get through it, I'm sure." Lapi nodded, then looked at Bevelle, and back to the room.

The rock clanked on one of the island pedestals and bounced, flying into the edge of a second "island", then the lava. Instantaneously, a tall wall of fire erupted where the rock had dropped. It looked like it was part of a maze. As the rock melted away, the fire maze disappeared.
"Great", Bevelle mumbled. "Looks like its take the wrong island and be flambed"

02-06 03:17 Rainfire 3196 - USR
Saria looked at the rock that Akihiko threw. "That worked in the last room, but will it work in here? I feel like each room keeps getting harder..." She said to everyone in general. Cleo watched where the rock had fallen in and shivered nevertheless she was not cold. "It feels like there are eyes in this room." She said quietly, still watching where the rock fell in. Saria began looking around the room, the islands looked stable, but are they? she wondered as she struck her foot out and lightly tapped the nearest island, jumping back to see what would happen...

"after Melody's post"
Saria laughed at Bevelle's suggestion, "I know its not funny, but I just got a picture in my head..." She stopped as a memory came up in her mind, "I used to do those mazes as a kid. The ones on the paper and you had to draw a line from the entrance to the exit. It always seemed to me that the way you were supposed to go was always the least obvious, maybe the same rules apply here?" She stuffed some rocks into her backpack next to a few rocks that she still have from the water room. "We could test this out with some more rocks..." She added...

Akihiko grinned. Well, we know not to take that one. The first island is safe though," he said happily. "I'm thinking we could just throw rocks and see which islands are bad and which aren't," he said, still rather afraid of the lave shishkabobing him.

02-06 03:21 melody_s_ang 9223 - USR
Bevelle watched as Saria tried to go onto of one of the islands. It shifted drastically against her weight and was relieved when she made it back on the solid ground. "Be careful," she shouted. "We need to work this out..."

02-06 03:24 :Lapis_Lazuli 11175 - USR
Lapi watched as the rock uncovered the wall of flames. "Ouch... this is gonna be tough." Then she heard what Saria said. "That's right. I used to love maze games. The right direction was usually the last way you'd think to go." She nodded in agreement to what the girl said. "If the same rules apply. Then perhaps we should look for a way that doesn't seem to be the correct way?" She looked at Bevelle, then back to the lava.

02-06 03:24 melody_s_ang 9224 - USR
Bevelle blinked. Would it work? Was it really that easy? She screwed her face up as if she was thinking. Concentrating. She repeated herself "Be careful" as Saria looked to be picking up stones. There had to be more then that.

02-06 03:30 Rainfire 3198 - USR
Cleo looked out onto the lava. "Well if the right way to go is the way that the stone is pulling Bevelle, shouldn't we go the opposite way?" She asked curiously, wondering if it would work. Saria nodded at Bevelle's concern, "There has to be something else, traps or an enemy or something, but if we don't try anything then we will never figure out what to do. Saria thought. She smiled at Lapi, they had something in common, maze games. "So if you was making a maze and I was the guy trying to get to the end, and you wanted to make it as challenging as possible, which way would be the right way?" she asked Lapi and everyone else, wanting to hear everyone's thoughts...

Akihiko grabbed a bunch of rocks and jumped onto the first island. "Well, I won't be there that until it's proven to me. In my opinion, rocks are much safer," he said, tossing a rock at another island. He wasn't used to being afraid. Apparently it made him crabby. Who knew?

The island the male on..began to shake and "move". Sure, it was safe from fire, but this added another wrinkle. Bevelle winced and shouted to him "be careful!" Before watching him throw rocks.
As he continued to throw the rocks around, the maze began to take form, only appearing while the rocks stay solidified, then disappearing. There "was" a clear path to the other side. The walls of fire hit the ceiling. On some of his throws, he also uncovered the other trap, rolling balls of fire that jump from the lava to another location.
The island he was on moved from one side to the other, but not into the maze. As long as he could balance himself, he was safe.
