

Cutie Beautiful ponies in need of homes

Forums Adoptables General Into the Woods - Ooo... What was that?! - Star

1 2 3 4 [5] 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 > 31

(Epicness) Rain jumped when the girls (Sleepy) eyes opened. She woke up fast! She thought shrieking away from the reaching hands, but not quite going away, she could not just leave the little girl all on her own after all. She was rather nervous around humans, but that was probably because she had been living on her own all her life. Her fur was fluffed out from fright at the girls' wakening, but she quickly smoothed it down and sat a little farther away from the girl, eyeing her a little warily... Sarita walked quietly along the river and wondered if perhaps, she could live around here for a while. It was quite pleasant. She looked around and moved closer to the edge of the water, listening to the birds chirping as they woke. Cleo realized that she was in a forest somewhere, and she looked around before striking off in a direction, seriously hoping she would come across some sign of life to tell her where in the world she was...

"Nice to meet you Lunar," he said. He noticed her blush and grinned wider. "Sorry if that made you embarrassed. It is my fault. You smell good. You are so cute." Akihiko said. Though she most likely didn't know it, he meant that last bit quite literally. Then, he sighed. "Ah well, it's probably just hunger making me talk this way."

Crow became bored quickly. He shuffled his paws for a moment before hitting his paw on a sharp stone. He yelped with pain, making Raven sit up. "Oh, Crow..." She picked him up and stood. Then, she headed towards the river. Crow did not "Ohh, Lady Raven," please put me down!" he said, looking up at her wormeely. She ignored him.

I'm not obsessive, I'm just a Loopy Lupine Lover.

(hope everyone has their characters selected in. I'll be posting the next plot piece after the tick.)

After clearing the sleep out of his eyes, Roman looked around at the river's bank. He noticed Lalita by the water. She looked young, and alone, and he was a little worried about her. She looked off to the north, not to her left, maybe, but he thought it best to check. So he headed over to her, calling from a little distance.

Ginger finally calmed down. One of her biggest worries about the future was the loss of food or water supply. Spirit walked over gently, then suddenly had a mood swing towards depression when she walked past Ginger. She felt sad for the environment. She took a quick look around to make sure nobody had noticed this. She then tried to make herself happy again, eventually succeeding.

Artemis, on the other hand, had gone into the small village outside of the forest. His goal was to make some friends. Then, he walked up to a little girl sleeping in a flowery meadow, and a man standing over her asking why she was lying there. "Hi! My name is Artemis, what is your name? Can we be friends? Hey, I want a hug, too!" He always got nervous around other people and started blurring things out. He tried to control it, but it just... happens.

Lunar blushed further as Akihiko persisted with her smelling good. The mention of the phrase 'good enough to eat' set off little alarm bells in the back of her mind, which she promptly attempted to ignore the moment he said that. It was just his hunger talking. "Then we should probably find you something to eat, huh?" Unless, of course, you'd prefer to stand there sniffing me all day." Lunar said teasingly. She refused to be completely under his thumb, though she couldn't say she had any real objections to it.

Sleepy still beaming from the wakeup call from the cat (Rain) was fully wide awake (at least for now lol). Letting the way cat cut out of her grasp she collected it walk around her with interest... plotting and planning on somehow adding her to the collection of stuffies and cuddly things she had at her house.

While planning this, she was greeted by another guardian (Chain) who had been watching her with interest. "Yes..." she replied shyly "I do... animals are very cuddly and I like cuddly things. But I gotta go now... ok? Bye bye!" And with that answer, she got up to her feet... stretched a bit more and headed on down to the river to wash her face and curls.

Being the guardian of dreams - sometimes her dreams crossed over into reality and she could still feel the sticky sweet-ness of the frosting all over her lol. Seeing a group of guardians and critters at the river she rushed over as fast as her little legs could carry her - curls bouncing in the wind... to see what was going on!

After Glow had gotten enough to drink she left the river. She ran for awhile, looking for something to eat. She eventually stopped at a flowery meadow. She nibbled on a flower for a moment, pricking her ears. She looked around, spotting some people a little ways away. There was a girl in purple, and some guy. Glow ducked down as she saw a couple of cats. She wasn't a real cat person. She was a little scared of cats. They chased rabbits.

Akihiko chuckled. "I don't think you quite understand what I eat," he said, tilting his head slightly. He found this rather amusing. "I had what I eat right here. In a way that is," he said shyly. "My advice is to not let your guard down around me though," he said.

I'm not obsessive, I'm just a Loopy Lupine Lover.

OOC: Editing didn't see the edit before... OOC: Seems like they would be 'Enemies' dont you think, ironic enough they are getting along quite well I think.

As Bevelle continued to sit on the soft grass, she noticed that the ground started to shake. Ripples could be seen inside her fur. Unnatural ripples. Fearing Gingers predicament, she frowned. Within seconds, a large ear-splitting explosion type noise echolocated through the woods. It was not something that is common in this area; in fact, purple guardian could recall a recent event (past 100 years) where something similar had happened. As the ground stopped shaking, Bevelle sighed in relief, only for that relief to be replaced with horror when she saw rising pillars of dark clouds shaped like a figure of a person, infused with fire. The smoke now pushing itself higher and higher into the near-perfect icy blue sky was coming form a previously uncharted section of land. Worried, the guardian of time knew that she needed to see what was happening and why. Getting up, she looked at the critters and guardians around her, before starting to leave for the epicenter of the explosion. "Something has to be done, now! I fear that this terrible force might come here otherwise. Who knows what it might destroy!" Ones looking at her face could see the leadership that Bevelle possessed. The worry didn't appear in her soft but stable voice and expression, she invited those who wanted to help to come along.

(I want to hug Sleepy, xD) Rain, having nothing else to do followed the girl in purple PJs (Sleepy) she was still rather curious about her, and wondered why she had left so suddenly. She sat back as the girl walked down to the river, when she felt the ground begin to shake she knew something was about to happen and she sprang up behind the girl (Sleepy) and began pulling on her PJs, trying to pull her away from the river...

Sarita heard someone coming close to the river (Raven and Crow) and she quickly melted back behind a bush, making sure her wings were covered by her cloak as she waited to see what was coming up on the other side of the river. The breeze began blowing a little, her hair floated towards the river and she tucked it up in a pony tail to keep it out of her way as she hid. The force of the gust before the wind started to blow, when she felt her head crack on a tree trunk and the world went dark. (She hit her head really hard and fainted)...

Raven, by this time, was at the River with Crow. "I'll come," she said, smiling. Crow jumped down from Raven's arms and padded over to where Sarita was hiding. "Stop hiding like a rabbit," he said crossly. He then shook his head and went back over to Raven.

I'm not obsessive, I'm just a Loopy Lupine Lover.

Akuu slowly roused herself up, her red hair scuffed in such a style commonly called the bed-head. Up ahead of her was her companion, Dakota. The eager bee she was had already groomed herself to look decent for the upcoming day. Her wings fluttered happily as she felt the warming rays of the sun surround her. Akuru was forced to squint, the light being much to bright.

"Good morning," chirped Dakota to her friend. Usually the same phrase would have been expected, but the red head remained silent, but managed a sleepy smile, her blue eyes taking in the scenery. When she finally finished prepping herself for the day, the two went off to explore. It wasn't long until they noticed a large group of other creature from Into the Woods. Dakota was seeing a group of guardians and critters at the river she rushed over as fast as her little legs could carry her - curls bouncing in the wind... to see what was going on!

It turned out, that as the two approached, the yellow bee-like guardian did separate from her friend. She dashed into the crowd and said to anyone nearby, "Good morning. I am Dakota" Some may have found her eager behavior quite annoying in such an early morning, but the Guardian had already dismissed the thought from her head.

Akuu wandered away, still having view of Dakota. She amused herself with the greenest blades of grass she had ever seen. Quite odd, but it was easy to amaze the girl. She took a few moments to wonder at the shining emerald blades with her wide curious crystal blue eyes.

Ayu woke with a fire start as the ground began to shake and large explosion echoed throughout the forest. He was hungry. With a few powerful flaps of her wings, Lunar took to the skies. It wasn't long until they noticed a large group of other creature from Into the Woods. Dakota was seeing a group of guardians and critters at the river she rushed over as fast as her little legs could carry her - curls bouncing in the wind... to see what was happening?

Akihiko's words surprised Lunar a little, and forced her to reach the realization that the alarm bells had been trying to convince her of. His fangs were suddenly all-to-obvious, and served as confirmation of her realization. She was about to reply when the ground began to shake violently, stopping her before she could say a word. The shaking stopped just as she was about to lose her balance, and Lunar's face turned skyward. Massive mushroom-like clouds billowed upwards from the horizon. She turned to look back at Akihiko, wondering how he would respond to this.

Artemis heard the explosion. Of course he heard it, it was HUGE! He ran over the the river and was glad to take the invite to join the exploration. Despite his rather shy, nervous nature, he always loved a good adventure! He just needed to know something. "Umm, Gingers? Where will we get our water on the journey?"

Ginger, being a truthful girl, answered honestly. "I-I don't know, Artemis. We could try and walk upstream and see if we can get water there is still safe. But we can't rest all of our down in it. She was more worried now than before, but tried to not show it. "Artemis, Spirit, help me pack up the campsite. We have hiking packs to store it in. Will any other guardian be nice and help me carry the packs?" Ginger asked this as kindly as possible, trying not to offend anybody or be pushy.

Spirit, on the other hand, didn't mind being pushed in this type of situation. She started barking orders to Ginger and Artemis on what their jobs would be for cleaning up the camp. She tried to distribute the tasks evenly amongst the three of them. Ginger would have to be doing all the packing, though, seeing as she was the one with apposable thumbs.

((OOC: Yes, my RL kitten really is adventurous. So adventurous that he is broken a leg and one toe before he turned two :)) What a stubborn little kitten... on the other hand, his leg cast made him look like a sock monkey :))

Before being able to head off, Bevelle felt a tug on her dress and bent down. The poor creature had managed to get her hand on what looked to be a Guardian. Frowning, she replied to him "I don't know, but something that I need to find. I fear destruction otherwise." She made an attempt to pet his head to try to soothe any fear she had placed into him. "I must go see what has happened. If you want, you can come and help out, but I won't put it past you if you choose to stay." With that, she nodded before running to the epicenter of the noise.

Akihiko looked towards the sound quickly. "What was that?" he asked nobody in particular. He then looked at Lunar. "You figured out my diet, now didn't you? Sorry," he said, taking her hand and kissing it quickly before running off towards the river, where the sound had come from.

I'm not obsessive, I'm just a Loopy Lupine Lover.

The loud noise was very shocking, and Roman stopped, looking over at Bevelle, who he hadn't noticed until she spoke up. He was surprised to see he'd missed how many other guardians and critters were around. Was there a convention? He could see that she was looking to take a leadership in this situation... maybe that she knew something about what was going on. But then he looked back at Lalita cooking. He hoped that one of her many guardians about was her babysitter or sibling.

Wishes watched the Guardians chat intently. She glanced down at the bright blue river as they spoke, worry crossing her mind lightly. What if the river did over flow? Her home would surely be destroyed, he fire thrown completely off track. With these thoughts, she led down in the sweet smelling grass, gazing up at the sky, lost in her own mind. What would become of their world if something that catastrophic happened? With a startle, the ground began to shake beneath her. Wishes let out an alarmed cry, jumping to her feet, fearing the earth would crack open under her feet. When the tremors subsided, she looked over at the female Guardian in purple. She followed her gaze to the rising smoke clouds, a look of shock replacing her plaintively thoughtful one. Wishes let out an alarmed cry, jumping to her feet, fearing the earth would crack open under her feet. "I'm going to go with you!" She declared, smiling boldly at that girl. She held her head high and her tail higher, hoping to seem brave and noble, neither of which was an emotion she was use to displaying. She watched as the girl dashed off and faced after her, determined to find out what was going on.

Aida's ears pricked up before she turned to see what was approaching her, whether it be predator or prey. Her eyes rested on what looked to be a Guardian- she couldn't really tell from this far away. She jumped with a start as the ground shook, water from the river splashing up onto her. She looked towards where dark clouds rose. Now this she needed to find out. She took off from her spot before the human could see her and ran in the general direction of the epicenter, stoic visions and stealth running through her veins along with adrenaline.

Glow winced slightly as she heard the explosion. She didn't like the looks of this at all. She sat and fox cautiously towards it, passing some guardians and critters along the way. She passed by a cat and fox cautiously before running. She slowed down, looking around. She didn't really want to go out. She spotted a girl in a blue and purple dress (Bevelle), and ran over to her. "Miss, do you mind if I tag along with you?" she asked, walking next to the guardian.

Cleo felt the rumbling and ran through the forest in fright, bursting into the clearing with all of the others. "Oh, sorry if I am intruding on anything, but will someone please tell me what that earthquake was about?" she asked to no one in particular and then wondered if there was anyway that she could help. She looked at the clouds billowing upward, it reminded her very much of a sandstorm back from her desert home, but of course those never had fire in them...

OOC: Ah, what the heck I'll just go and post again Maji looked in the distance and started running from his small home to get a better view of what happened. He instantly slammed to the ground and skidded a little eventually with his back braced against a tree. He cleared his head and looked up and laughed along with his friend, whom he bumped into. The two of them got up and saw a guardian running toward the commotion dressed in a blue and purple dress (Bevelle), and ran over to her. "Miss, do you mind if I tag along with you?" she asked, walking next to the guardian (Akihiko). Chain noticed his eyes and ran after his friend just as curious as he was to find out what was going on.

His to beginning to quiver with fear, he accepted the pretty guardian's pat on the head. "I don't want destruction...not here in our world." He frowned, thinking, as the guardian nodded to him and ran off toward the center of the noise. Finally he decided. "Miss please wait! I wanna help you too!" Putting his trusty acorn securely in his hand, he raced after her.

"Huh? I could have sworn I heard voices here..." Kaori complained. She noticed tracks going away from the river, and began to follow them. Free followed, tired of Kaori's constant investigations. Kaori looked up and saw a girl with a bumble bee outfit (Dakota), and ran to her. "Hello. My name is Kaori, and this is my companion, Free." Kaori turned, expecting to have Free by her side, but instead Free was covering behind a bush. "Forgive her, she's not very people-friendly..." Kaori told her quickly. Free stared at the bee-dressed girl, but a rumbling sound distracted her from it. Suddenly a large explosion rung out into the air, and the ground shook, knocking Kaori off her feet. "What was that?" She jumped up.

Lunar couldn't help but blush as the vampire guardian kissed her hand. What could she do? He was kinda cute, and was the only person to have complemented her in the longest time, even if it wasn't long before she was flying just above Akihiko, keeping pace with him easily. "You know, it's kinda rude to tell a girl you're a vampire, kiss her hand, and run off," she said teasingly. So what if he was a vampire? Lunar could live without a pint or two of blood. She winked at him and raced off toward the river.

Dakota was much too busy trying to get the attention of another to notice the strange explosion. Hopefully someone could fill her in on the situation. Meanwhile, Akuru did happen to notice the strange phenomenon. Scared, the child-like Guardian desperately searched for her friend. Since her gaze was momentarily distracted, she was unable to relocate her. At the least, she wanted company, and this is my companion, Free." Kaori turned, expecting to have Free by her side, but instead Free was covering behind a bush. "Forgive her, she's not very people-friendly..." Kaori told her quickly. Free stared at the bee-dressed girl, but a rumbling sound distracted her from it. Suddenly a large explosion rung out into the air, and the ground shook, knocking Kaori off her feet. "What was that?" She jumped up.

((OOC: Edit for Star's post. You guys are too fast! XD))

((ooc: if your character is talking to Bevelle asking her if they can join, assume that she give a nod or something similar. Shes in a form of haste where shes not stopping until she gets close to whatever is happening))

Akihiko heard the two following him and quickly spun around. He glared, standing squarely in front of them. He saw Lunar and stopped, smiling at her. "Sorry," he said sheepishly. Then he looked back at the two that were following him. "And you are?" he asked, tilting his head.

I'm not obsessive, I'm just a Loopy Lupine Lover.