Wishes trotted along with the group, picking her way around rocks and dips in the ground. She caught sight of a Guardian looking very sleepy and, bored and sick of being all alone, ran up to her. "Do you know where we're going, miss? We've been waiting for what feels like forever and I don't know where we are any more..." She said, letting her head drop down slightly. The new surroundings confused her and she didn't like the feel of the ancient air of the road they were on. And she was tired of walking. Plus, there were so many Guardians and critters around her- normally some many people would have excited her but this amount was almost too much. Wishes's tail drooped and dragged on the ground behind her. She had been in such a good mood this morning and this stupid blast had to ruin it for her.

Althea turned at the voice (eee) and spoke "I have no idea i was hoping you guys would come i didn't she anything at all i could only feel the pain and fright of the critters the first and knew i find out what was happening would you mind if i join i may be able to help?"

Ginger flew up to see she could see the entire group, and looked down trying to see any other critters in need of a ride. So being none, she looked for a spot to land. She saw one right next to a boy slightly on purpose. She could see was a red saging hat. She landed gracefully and look to her side. It was Cham that was wearing the odd hat.
Suddenly, Ginger noticed how adorable that hat made him. She made a mind diggle, and then tried to talk to him, but it didn't exactly come out... right. "Umm, hi, I'm G-Ginger, and you're Cham, right? You know, I'm totally cool with the whole 'Guardian of Nightmares' thing because I get a lot of nightmares and they normally take the future and they, sometimes look down at Hahaha... ha... ha..." She said nervously and desperately. She really hoped he couldn't tell that it was him who was making her act this way.

Within minutes, the area came to a small clearing off to the right-hand side. The palms bordered the group, and grass grew in the center. Off to the back edge, there appeared to be a small cavern. Though the sun did not shine here, rays touched the liquid silver of metal. Something was inside the cave. Something dangerous, making Bevelle wince.
The clearing itself was very small and looked to have once housed some sort of memorial. Old and ancient broken pillars of white were on the ground in clumps, while some of the pillars, still broken off, remained firmly rooted in the ground. The memorial, housed in the center of the tiny clearing, was that of large pieces of unbroken flagstone crafted in a 4 foot sculpture. On it, an ancient language chiseled into the stone began to lightly glow. The words themselves were not of any current known language. It would be impossible to decipher them without some help.
Bevelle ran her hand against the ancient markings. Though she could not read it, she felt a pulse to it. The glow of the words could now be seen under the guardians hand. It pulsed its eerie blue-white glow then dimmed. The same wind that Bevelle felt on the flagstone path twirled "through" her. Standing in front of her, on the other side of the monuments, stood what she at first thought were other guardians. They were there, and they were both in a defensive stance.

Bevelle hadn't seen their faces before, though it felt as though she knew them. There was a male and female, both with tattered armor and scars on their bodies. The female guardian could see through them, and they glowed in an eerie light. She could make out the colour and details on their armor. They both appeared to have a combination of emotions on them. Anger, hurt, puzzlement, betrayal. Realizing that she was looking at the warriors of the ancient past, the guardian of time took her free hand to her mouth.
She mentally kicked herself for not seeing it sooner. The "monument" was a grave site. The warriors were of an ancient race. They had died while doing something. And two of their spirits were staring straight at her.

((Here we are introducing a new guardian option called "Armor" - created by the talented, lonesledruid and templated by me!))

The little squirrel was nearly dead to the world, but he still clung tightly to his acorn. The voice behind to disappear as his eyes closed, he could feel himself being lifted. He could hear more voices, more creatures to help investigate this strange happening. Knowing nothing bad could happen while he slept, Ayu let his mind drift, knowing whatever they were about to face would require the bulk of any energy he could regain.
eta: ((new plot part!))
Still completely knocked out, Ayu didn't noticed the wind or feel Bevelle's change of emotion. He didn't even realize they had arrived somewhere, somewhere important. Lost in a dreamless sleep, he slept on, oblivious to what was about to occur.

Ginger flew over to see these warriors. She loved a good battle story. Even she was surprised for not seeing what was about to happen. She noticed that the boy had devil's wings and the girl had angel's wings. Wow, what a personality spirit! * She hoped right up to them and said, "Hi! My name is Ginger, and this is Artemis and Gint! * turns back to let the critters greet the warriors"
Spirit and Artemis both waved their paws awkwardly, wondering what the proper greeting should be when meeting two long dead warriors that popped out of a grave...
((OOC: Edit! Will you be voicing these characters, Melody?))

Althea join the group any how and then to her shock felt a overwhelming amount of emotions witch at first she thought where from the group but quickly notice it was from some one else.
She eyed the purple guardian looking at a strange glow which looked like to other guardians and looked back at the (Bevelle) purple guardian face and notice she looked as if she saw them.
So she asked do you know them?

(Yeah! My favorite costume came to life! "hugs Fae and Melody" "DeDeheh! I am sooo excited for the armor! Squeee!" *spazic rainy gear knight-crazy Oh and I did ever mention that Saria was trained as a knight "nods" its very true even before I saw the armor.)
Saria gazed past Bevelle (she had heard others call her by that name along the way), and looked around the stone structure. A grave. She thought, and her heart twinged with a painful memory of someone smiling. She pushed her emotions down for the moment, and she leaned against one of the pillars for support, her wings were hurting now, and she could feel something ominous in the air. She felt under her cloak and touched the hidden handle of her sword for comfort, she was sagging into the stone, the memories of her past haunting the present. She looked back at Bevelle and wondered what they would do next, if this was a quest, she intended to fulfill! It to the end...
Rain immediately(sp?) sank to the ground when they stopped, staying close to Sleepy the entire time. She had decided to stick with her, she looked around, this place gave her the creeps, but at least it was a resting spot...
Cleo smiled, "I don't think anyone will mind, and I bet you will be a great help." She replied...

~ Sleepy looked down at Wishes and replied " I have nooo idea where we are going no .. probably along this path though" ... and it was then that she noticed the cavern an it's inhabitants.
"Whoaaaa it is glowing!" - she remarked in amazement.

Luna saw the small group of guardians and her eyes went wide. "Ooi Let's follow, Lapi!" She gripped the girls wrist tightly and ran as fast as she could after them. Lapi screamed. "Slow down!" Her eyes closed as she held the plushies in her arms. Luna skidded to a stop when the group had suddenly stopped. Before them was a couple of guardians covered in armor. Lapi slammed into the back of her. "Ow... Why did you?" She looked up, rubbing her face and saw the two guardians. Wow, sag looked and stood there. Luna still had her wings. Lapi looked around at the other guardians. This is so embarrassing... She looked down at her plushies - her face turning red slightly. Luna had made quite a bit of noise on their way - so Lapi didn't want anyone to think they were strange. Her eyes moved back up to the guardians - who are they...? She wondered, looking around at the grave site they stood at.

Artemis, seeing Rain standing there looking confused, hopped out of the pack and went to see her. "Hi, I'm Artemis, what's your name? You seem very nice." He hoped he had pushed the nervousness out of his voice enough to sound casual. Unfortunately, he suspected that he hadn't. He really hoped that Rain hadn't noticed.

The female warriors face is mixed now with extreme puzzlement as she sees creatures unfamiliar to her approach her. The male, just behind her begins to breathe heavily. Both are on their defense.

Well, the little girl hadn't said anything, seemed toally wrapped up in what she was doing, so Roman instead had run off after Bevelle and the large group that had gathered. He hadn't really thought to ask why everyone just happened to be around the river. Must have just been a very popular hiking spot, not that he'd noticed before.
When there was a little pause, with the group stopped to look at stones, he was more interested in taking the opportunity to ask if the natural leader knew anything about it, why she'd taken this path, since following just for adventure's sake seemed like a great idea but hardly satisfied his curiosity. But as soon as he opened his mouth to ask, two Guardians appeared, and he stared. Woah. He was pretty nervous as two of the group just up and approached the strangers. They looked very unusual. A little unreal. So he turned to Bevelle, hoping that he might catch her obviously divided attention, and asked "Woah, are they for real? Were you looking for them?" Now seemed like no time to say hi, just to cut to the chase.

Saria thought of an idea from her old training. She walked a little forward and spread her arms out wide to show that she was not going to harm them, "We mean you no harm, are you the guardians of this cavern?" she asked...
Rain smiled at Artemis. "I'm Rain." she replied, smiling, and then she glowed a little. "And you seem nice to Artemis?" She meowed. She then looked at Sitey and the glowing objects. "Yeah, I wonder what makes them glow?" She meowed to her...

Lapi's head turned and her eyes went wide when the two started moving. Seeing one of the other guardians (Ginger) speak to them - she gulped. Her and Luna had only come to see them just now - so she had not place to talk to the two warriors. Her eyes shifted between the two - seeing them become defensive - she held the plushies in her arms tightly. Luna looked back at Lapi, and smiled - then turned back to the warriors - watching them.

Glow looked at the two new guardians that appeared. It took her a moment to realize that they were spirits. They were in a graveyard. She walked around the small area, sniffing at the pillars curiously. This area made her sad. Why did they have to come to a graveyard? She was sure it was important though. She sat down next to one of the pillars, watching the guardians curiously, wondering if they would tell the others what was going on.

"I have absolutely no idea" replied Artemis truthfully. He was happy that a conversation had been started. "Maybe that is where the spirits really are. I mean, as in, the spirits before us are just in a non-touchable form, and the real spirits are inside the tomb, making a the glowing." He sat beside Rain and looked up to see Sleepy looking tired. He decided to curl up in her lap and purr for a while. After a while, her lap looked very comfortable....
